READING

1 Read the passage carefully.

A Journey to the Stars

When a young Saudi animation studio announced its first space adventure film, few people expected it to become a global success. The film tells the story of two young astronauts who travel beyond our solar system to save a dying planet. Not only did the producers hire experienced animators, but they also worked closely with astronomers so that every scene would be scientifically accurate.

To capture the feeling of weightlessness, the animators studied videos of real astronauts and used computers to simulate low gravity. The result is phenomenal: the characters float, spin and drift in a way that looks completely natural.

By the end of this year, the film will have been shown in more than forty countries. However, some critics argue that the ending is too abrupt and that the story is neither original nor surprising. Either way, the film has shown that Saudi studios can compete with the biggest names in the industry.

READING

1 Read the passage carefully.

Life on Mars?

For centuries, people have looked at the night sky and wondered whether humans could one day live on another planet. Today, that dream is closer than ever. Several space agencies and private companies are developing reusable rockets that could carry astronauts to Mars, the fourth planet from the Sun.

However, living on Mars will not be easy. The planet is extremely cold, its atmosphere is mostly carbon dioxide, and its gravity is only about one third of Earth's. Scientists are therefore designing special homes that will protect people from radiation, as well as greenhouses where astronauts can grow their own food.

Some experts predict that by 2050, the first small community will have settled on the planet. By then, robots will have been preparing the surface for several years, building roads and collecting water from ice. Others believe that such plans are too expensive and that the money should be spent on solving problems on Earth first. Whatever happens, space travel will continue to inspire new inventions that make our everyday lives easier.

2 Write True or False.

1.	Mars is the fourth planet from the Sun.
2.	The gravity on Mars is stronger than on Earth.
3.	Scientists are designing greenhouses so that astronauts can grow food.
4.	All experts agree that sending people to Mars is a good idea.

Streaming Changes the Way We Watch

Not long ago, families gathered in the living room at a fixed time to watch their favourite programme together. If they missed an episode, they had to wait for a repeat. Today, streaming services have changed this habit completely. Viewers can watch films and series whenever they want, on almost any device, and they can either watch one episode at a time or finish a whole season in a single weekend.

This freedom has clear advantages. People are no longer controlled by TV schedules, and they can discover programmes from many different countries. Producers, too, are creating series that are not only longer but also more expensive than traditional TV shows, with phenomenal special effects and famous actors.

However, some experts are worried. They point out that watching several episodes without a break can affect sleep and make people less active. Others say that family members now watch different things on separate screens, so they spend less time together. As one media researcher put it, "Streaming has given us more choice than ever, yet we must learn to use it wisely."

2 Choose True or False.

2. Streaming services allow viewers to watch on many devices.
